I am being heavily email spammed from subscription mailing lists from about.com . I have tried to contact them to get it stopped. They will not respond. Does anyone know of a contact there or what else can be done?

It's like a rain dance, except a rain dance works. I thought there were rules about C&C warnings here... :^) What's C&C warnings ? Several regulars in this newsgroup had keyboards ruined by spewing coffee on them from uncontrollable laughter when they had a mouthful of coffee. Regulars started adding warnings to the subjects of their posts when they were writing anything that might cause uncontrollable laughter. Then one regular (Hi, Patricia!) not only spewed or spilled hot coffee but did so on the cat curled up on her lap. I am not sure if she still bears the scars from the claw marks or not. The warning for humorous posts was extended to and then abbreviated to C&C. Since some people don't drink coffee and own dogs or other animals (instead of having cats own them), C&C can also be interpreted as consumables and companions . From my bookmarks so may contain broken links, sodium propionate to retard spoilage, and/or MSG to enhance flavour: The Net Abuse Jargon File <http://www.ncf.carleton.ca/ip/freenet/subs/complaints/spam/jargon.txt> The Anti-Spam Glossary (I think one of these two links is obsolete but I am not sure which) <http://www.grapevine.net/~medintz/antispam/glossary.html> <http://www.idir.net/~medintz/antispam/glossary.html> Spam glossary <http://www.rahul.net/falk/glossary.html> THE Jargon File (aka _The New_Hacker's_Dictionary_) <http://www.tuxedo.org/~esr/jargon/html/> includes such entries as: TINLC <http://www.tuxedo.org/~esr/jargon/html/entry/TINLC.html> Lumber Cartel <http://www.tuxedo.org/~esr/jargon/html/entry/Lumber-Cartel.html> and a lot more. It's well worth browsing. 'Merkins can drop the appropriate 'u'. No, not humouros , humorous . Oh? Did that warrant a C&C warning? I didn't think it was that funny. flavor for 'Merkins. By the way, these are footnotes.

Patricia A. Shaffer proclaimed on news.admin.net-abuse.email that: Oh, I do, indeed, on abdomen and shoulder ... the ones on my thigh and breast have quite faded, though. And Nikki, the Siamese so discommoded, has forgiven me ... she brought me a freshly killed mouse yesterday. <g What did you say? Not ewwww-yuck surely? :) I said, Oh, Nikki, is that for me? She purred assent. I picked it up by the tail and examined it: it was a large male with brownish fur on its tail, looked like a cross between a gerbil and a field mouse, with not a mark on it, no blood, just a funny angle to the neck. I told Nikki what a fine huntress she was, and what a clean kill she had brought me, and, of course I thanked her. She washed her whiskers and paws, then curled up on the chair for a nap. I wrapped the gift in a paper towel, and surreptitiously tucked it in the trash-barrel outside. Later, I gave Nikki a piece of roast beef, when the other cats were out on the front porch railing watching it snow. Patricia A.
