
valentines gift for man Valentine's Day Gifts for men?

Posted by Chloe - 2008/05/13 05:12

is basketball, but I rarely watch that, except for my college alma mater's team. This is one of Dennis' recurring themes. Some people would probably figure that the valentines gift for man Valentine's Day Gifts for men?

=====

Posted by Bill - 2008/05/13 05:12

Go to a store and see where the men are hanging out. This would be all the way in the back of the store. They put the mens stuff there so they will have to take the wife and kids past womens stuff and toys. So check out hunting/camping/fishing. Automotive, Hardware. The highest density of men per square foot will be found in Stereo/TV/Electronics... Hints... -A nice new big screen Sony HDTV would be well received by any male... -Food to go with TV - popcorn, chips, dip, etc. -Top of the line car CD player. -Tools - Screwdriver set. (Old ones always worn out.), drill bit set (small bits always broken or lost.), channel locks, vise grips, crescent wrenches, etc. -Gift certificate at home improvement, camping, fishing, automotive, or video rental store. -Candy is dandy!

=====

valentines gift for man Valentine's Day Gifts for men?

Posted by Dennis - 2008/05/13 05:12

This is one of Dennis' recurring themes. Some people would probably figure that the

=====

valentines gift for man Valentine's Day Gifts for men?

Posted by arianej - 2008/05/13 05:12

Go to a store and see where the men are hanging out. This would be all the way in the back of the store. They put the mens stuff there so they will have to take the wife and kids past womens stuff and toys. So check out hunting/camping/fishing. Automotive, Hardware. The highest density of men per square foot will be found in Stereo/TV/Electronics... This does, of course, assume one's male SO follows this standard stereotype. ;) DH wouldn't really care for a big screen TV, as he doesn't watch TV often and we already have more TVs than we need since we inherited one from a relative. He's not really into tools or hanging around hardware stores, either. After a long trip to Montana in his 20's where it rained for weeks on end, he's sworn never to go camping again.. laughs Now, a CD player for the car would be appreciated, snacks and candy less so since he usually tries NOT to snack. DH's favorite gifts tend to be books, gift certificates to bookstores, CDs from his favorite artists, etc. But for Valentine's Day, we tend to skip the individual presents to each other and have a nice dinner at home or go out to eat. DH loves food. :) Basically, I think the idea of men gifts or women gifts are of limited use. I'd prefer a gift certificate to a bookstore to several dozen roses and a box of chocolates. Heck, I'm weird, I'd prefer a gift certificate to a gourmet grocery store, cookware store, etc. rather than flowers and candy. Many husbands might be in the doghouse for buying their wife a skillet for Christmas. I loved it. You just have to go on a case by case basis... Ariane

=====

valentines gift for man Valentine's Day Gifts for men?

Posted by Richard - 2008/05/13 05:12

cook anyway..... also think you should call me at 404-lol:) Woah are you ever way off dude! Learn to snoop through someone's headers every once in a while, dunno where you live that would have you referring to Ontario, Canada as the South ... R

=====

valentines gift for man Valentine's Day Gifts for men?

Posted by Chloe - 2008/05/13 05:12

<snip Now, a CD player for the car would be appreciated, snacks and candy less so since he usually tries NOT to snack. DH's favorite gifts tend to be books, gift certificates to bookstores, CDs from his favorite artists, etc. But for Valentine's Day, we tend to skip the individual presents to each other and have a nice dinner at home or go out to eat. DH_loves_food. :) DH and I'll be celebrating with dinner out at a special occasion restaurant. I tend to agree that the gender-specific gifts are kind of a bore on both sides.

=====

valentines gift for man Valentine's Day Gifts for men?

Posted by arianej - 2008/05/13 05:12

DH and I'll be celebrating with dinner out at a special occasion restaurant. I tend to agree that the gender-specific gifts are kind of a bore on both sides. Eh, some people like them. DH had a former co-worker who sweated it out every year wondering if two dozen red roses and a box of candy would appease his wife. Don't get me wrong, I don't turn down flowers and candy but there are plenty of other things I'd rather have. Like dinner at our favorite sushi bar, which DH also likes. :) If we're feeling restive or particularly frugal, we collaborate on making a special dinner at home.

Ariane

=====